National Cheng Kung University
Medical College
Institute of Allied Health Sciences

Semester: Spring, 2007
Course: TA70620 Seminar II
          TA70640 Seminar IV
Date: Friday
Time: 3:10pm–5:00pm
Classroom: Nursing Department 85 x 09

The seminar is a serial course, provided in four consecutive semesters. The seminar is developed to enhance student’s ability in research, professional practice, and leadership, with a long-term goal to broaden students’ horizons to an international level. Students will present topics related to current health care issues pertinent to clinical psychology, nursing, occupational therapy, and physical therapy. Students are also required to actively participate in discussion to facilitate an academic interaction between the presenter and audience. An ultimate goal of this course is to foster the dialogue among different professions and facilitate inter-disciplinary cooperation in research and practice.

Course Objectives
Upon the completion of this course, students will be able to:
1. have a basic understanding of some research issues in different health care disciplines,
2. name different research questions and appropriate designs to address these questions,
3. identify their primary interested research topics that may be developed into doctoral dissertation project later,
4. give (English) presentation to multi-disciplinary audience,
5. respond to audience’s comments and questions appropriately, lead and facilitate discussion after presentation.